Goal: Many times it's happens to live in the same city for a really long period of time and to don't realize how little you know your city. When is the last time that you visited a museum? And how much do you know about the important places in your city? Well the goal of this activity is to discover your city as a tourist, to get to know the history of it, or maybe to visit some monuments or museums, depends of your preferences.

Method:

1. The easiest way to learn new things about your city is to go with your friends at the tourist info center and to ask for a guided tour. In many European cities are free guided tours so you can see if there are also in your town.
2. If in your city are no guided tours or if you consider it is too expensive, you can establish with your friends to organize one for you by yourself.
3. All you have to do is to make a list with things/places you want to see or to learn more about and to share the tasks. Here you can use the map, because everyone is going to choose two or three places to be guide.
4. Make an itinerary with the chosen places to be easier and establish a date for the tour.
5. After everybody has chosen the places you can go to inform about those places, on the tourist center or on internet, or even by asking people that are working in those places if is a church or a museum for example. Try to find interesting stories to make everything catchier for your friends.
6. In the day of the tour don't forget to take a photo camera and enjoy new perspective of your city and the stories that your friends are going to tell you.
